Rest! rest! it is the Day of Rest-there needs no book to tell The truth that every thoughtful eye, each heart can read so well : Rest, rest! it is the Sabbath morn, a quiet fills the Some whispered voice of peace repeats that rest is everywhere.

[Prom Chambers's Edinburgh Journal.]

THE DAY OF BEST.

O weary heart! O heart of woe! raise up thy toilwarn brow; The fields, the trees, the very breeze-they all are resting n w; The air is still, there is no sound save that unceasing hum, The lasect song of summer time that from the woods doth come.

And even that seems fainter now, like voices far As thou they only sang of rest, and labor'd not toclear blue heaven.

The hum of bees seem softer, too, from out the As if the lowliest creatures knew this day for rest The specious tracts of meadow-land, of bean-fields and of wheat, And all the glebe, are undisturbed by sound of Labor's feet: The cotter in his Sunday garb, with peace within his breast, Roams idly by the garden side, and feels himself at

The stream , the trees, the woods, the breeze, the bird, and roving bee, Seem all to breathe a softer seand, a holier melody; You little church, too, tells of rest, to all the summer For the bell long since has ceased to peal that coll'd to praise and prayer. But while I stand mid thes : tall eline, a sound comes creeping near. That falls like music heard in dreams upon my charmed ear:

Like music heard in dreams of heaven, that sacred sound doth steal From where the old church aisles repeat the organ's solem peal Now Heaven be praised! a racious boon is this sweet rest to me-How many shall this truth repeat to day on bended How many a weary heart it cheers, how many an aching broast! Now Heaven be praised, a gracious boon is thi weet day of rest!

M'LLE RACHEL IN TROUBLE.-We have already noticed the commencement of a suit at Paris against M'lle Rachel to compel her to play Medea in a tragedy of that name, by M. Legouve, which she had once promised to undertake, but had afterwards refused. After the evidence had been heard, M. Chaix d'Est Ange. the advocate of M'lle Rachel, contended that she had never absolutely engaged to play the character, and that all the expressions of approbation of the part attributed to her by the witnesses were mere phrases of ordinary courtesy toward an author. He affirmed that she had honestly endeavored to reconcile herself to a revolting part, but at last, being persuaded in her judgment that it was not suited to her genius, she felt compelled, in justice to her own reputation, to renounce it. He reproached M. TURES, embracing many new and beautiers.

Legouve for going to law to force a great terms, which will be sold at the manufacturers. Legouve for going to law to force a great artist to be a mere speaking machine. The court, however, thought M'lle Rachel wholly without any ground of defence; she had clearly contracted with M. Legouve to play Medea, and the contract is one recognized by law. M'lle Rachel was therefore decreed to play the part at the Française forthwith, and in default pay 200f. for every day's delay for the space of two months. At the end of that time, if she still refuses, she

He immediately began at the top of his voice:

"John Bell and Elizabeth Bell-John Bell and Elizabeth Bell-JOHN BILL AND ELISABETH BELL."

"One at a time," said the Judge. "One at a time-one at a time-ONB AT A TIME," shouled the constable. "Now you've done it!" exclaimed the Judge, out of patience. "Now you've done it-now you've done court, bar, and by standers broke out in a hearty laugh, to the perfect surprise and dismay of the astonished constable.
